

Miracle Woman Is Alive After Electrical Shock

Authorities said that it is a miracle that a Huntsville area lady is alive after she touched her car while it was in contact with a high voltage hydro cable last week.

Mrs. Wallace Little of Chaffey Township has been released from the Huntsville and District Memorial Hospital, where she was treated for shock and burns to several parts of her body.

Mrs. Little was returning to her Highway 35-60 home, a couple of miles from Huntsville, in company with her 14-year-old son Lockey and her mother, Mrs. Ida Schell, who was going there for a visit from her home at Haliburton.

The three were in the front seat of the car when, about 11 p.m., the vehicle struck a hydro line that had fallen on Highway 35 near Dorset. Sparks flew around the car.

Fearing that the vehicle would ignite, Mrs. Little got out of the car and was proceeding to the opposite side to make certain her mother and son would be freed. She touched the car and was knocked to the ground unconscious.

A hydro official at Minden said that an insulator had broken allowing the line to fall across the road. Workmen had not at the time arrived on the scene to make repairs.

Lockey burned the palm of his left hand as he emerged from the car. Mrs. Schell was not injured.

There was a car parked nearby and Lockey ran to the driver who drove a short distance to the Forest Ranger School.

In the meantime, Mrs. Schell massaged her daughter's arms in an effort to revive her. "I thought she was dead," Mrs. Schell recalled. "She must have been unconscious for about 15 minutes before she started to come around."

J. D. Ryan of the Ranger School appeared on the scene and returned to the school for assistance, warning Mrs. Schell and Lockey to stay away from the car.

Returning to the car, Mr. Ryan took Mrs. Little to the Ranger School where a nurse was summoned from Dorset and first aid administered. Mrs. Little was later rushed to Huntsville and District Memorial Hospital.

Her body was burned in all places where there was any metal on her clothing. Her hair was singed by bobby pins.

Mrs. Little is the mother of seven children, five of whom are at home.

The car came in contact with the hydro line in the vicinity of the Pine Springs School. The line carried 7,200 volts.

The trailer blocked the highway for about 30 minutes. Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $400.

Fur Prices Rise

The Haliburton Trapper's Association held their first Raw Fur Sale of this season on Friday, December 17, 1965 at Haliburton. Good seasonable pelts well handled brought good prices.

The following is the top prices confirmed by the buyers which they paid: Beaver up to $28.00, Fisher $30.00, Marten $10.00, Muskrats to $1.75 each, Otter $45.00, and Mink up to $15.00.

President Harold Bannon said a new system was used for the first time which proved very successful and speeded the sale up by about seventy-five percent. Some minor changes will be made at the next sale to further improve it.

Trappers praised the Executive on the new system. Early in October of this year, the Executive and five Directors held a meeting at the Empire Hotel in Huntsville with leading buyers and discussed the new system which has proved very successful.

The January Fur Sale should be very good for the trappers who have seasonable and well handled pelts.

Buyers from North Bay, Sudbury, Shelby, and Montreal attended this Sale.

Christmas Tree Lights Stolen

Several citizens of Haliburton have reported to the Echo this week that they have had their Christmas lights stolen from their exterior house decorations.

It seems that some pranksters are making a practice of stealing these Christmas lights.

It seems hard to believe that people would steal these lights from houses which are so nicely decorated for Christmas.

SUGAR AND SPICE

by Bill Smiley

BENEATH THE TINSEL

Are you one of those birds who goes around in a perpetual grump at this time of year? Whether we like it or not, the celebration of Christmas has changed drastically in the last generation or so.

Many people resent this and regret it. They feel that commercialism has taken over the festive season, that the true meaning of Christmas has been smothered in a swirl of electronics and gimmickry, of advertising and noise and vulgarity and pure greed. I don't agree.

Admitted, Christmas is no longer a simple observance of the birth of Christ. In a complex and neurotic age, it has become complex and neurotic. Physically, the holiday is exhausting, and financially it is crippling.

But it's a little too glib, and certainly naive, to suggest that the spirit of Christmas has been lost.

Certainly, Santa Claus and Rudolph are pagan figures. Certainly, some of the "Christmas" songs are nauseating. Certainly, many Christians are utter gluttons at this season. Certainly, many of the decorations and cards and gifts are in the poorest taste.

But these are only material things, the outer trappings of the great festival. Beneath these gaudy robes, the bones of Christmas — the grand old carols, the simple, enthralling story — are as strong as ever. And the great heart of Christmas — the real desire for peace and goodwill — beats as warmly as ever.

Brownies and Cubs go caroling to homes for the aged. Service clubs and church groups and women's organizations hustle around with boxes of cheer for the sick and the poor. Firemen and legionnaires repair toys and wrap gifts for under-privileged children.

Almost everyone, however temporary it may be, begins to glow with a genuine desire to give, to love, to be one of a great human fellowship. No, don't tell me the true spirit of Christmas is disappearing.

Come, now, all you Scrooges. Admit it. You enjoy giving at Christmas, even though you grumble a bit, and even though you have to do without things yourself. Until next June.

And one of the great things about Christmas, the real Christmas, is that the gifts that really count don't have to be wrapped, and don't cost a cent.

What finer gift can we give our children than the teaching of the lovely carols, the telling of the thrilling story? And what greater gift can they give us than the look of wonder and delight in their eyes?

Think of all the other incomparable gifts for which no charge account or credit card is involved:

An invitation to Aunt Martha to spend Christmas Day with you, even though she's 86, deaf as a stone, belches like a riot-tent, and always carries a crock in her purse.

A warm smile for your husband on Christmas morning and the heart-felt statement that you always HAVE liked Christmas trees leaning at a 45-degree angle.

A warm smile for your wife on Christmas morning, and the fervent remark that she's never looked lovelier, even though she resembles a camp-follower in the Crimean War.

A simple announcement from your wife on Christmas morning, in the twentieth year of your marriage, when your kid are in high school or college. "Guess what, dear. We're going to have a baby."

A sincere, sympathetic phone call to your neighbour on Christmas morning, when you discover that his front-lawn display, featuring Santa Claus and the Seven Dwarfs, has blown down in the night. Interspersed, of course, with a few jolly "Ho! Ho! Ho's!" in the spirit of the season.

These are the gifts that give real joy, whether you're giving or receiving, if you have the true spirit of Christmas. Now wait a minute. Don't rush back to the stores with your wife's mink stole or your kids' toys. Just in case . . .

What Christmas Means To Me

At Christmas I like to think of the Lord Jesus Christ, how God sent him to save our sins, the spirit of giving as the Wise Men gave to Jesus.

But to me as I think it does to every child I like to receive. I like thinking of a large turkey with gravy on a beautifully coloured tray, the cake on the table with the snow-white frosting and the trees and lights acting as one bright star leading us toward Him as it did the shepherd.

I truly wish I could devote all of my thoughts to the right meanings, but I know every small child's Christmas would be spoiled if some of the wrong meanings were not brought out.

A Pot Of Beans Is Eskimo Favorite Christmas Feast

By WALT MAKDATOR

Most Canadians, when they sit down to Christmas dinner, want to see the table laden with turkey, ham and rich plum puddings. Eskimos, however, would prefer to see—beans!

For on Christmas Day, many of Canada's 11,500 Eskimos, especially those living on Baffin Island, take part in a traditional Yuletide feast called a "Bean Feed."

This Christmas meal is prepared in a large pot, and can best be described as a bean stew.

"They use beans as the staple, then add meat . . . vegetables . . . everything they can to it," explained Mrs. Michael Gardener, wife of an Anglican missionary at Cape Dorset on Baffin Island.

Cape Dorset is typical of the four Anglican missions on Baffin Island and of the 16 others dotting the Arctic.

About 150 Eskimos are permanently settled at this mission, but the population doubles to 300 for Christmas.

BY DOG SLED

"About two days before Christmas, the Eskimos who live outside the mission begin arriving by dog sled. Some have to travel for three or four days . . . even longer," declared Mrs. Gardener.

In years past, Christmas was an ordeal for most Eskimos throughout the north since they lived in isolated places and had to travel great distances through the worst days of winter in order to attend Christmas services at a mission or settlement.

But today, more and more are taking permanent residence near mines, at air bases and on defense installations such as those along the DEW line.

There are still Eskimos who prefer to live far from settlements, content to continue hunting as in the old days rather than working for the white man or going on government relief.

Children of these families are brought into settlements, however, and placed in the charge of residential schools. One such school is the Roman Catholic one at Inuvik on the Mackenzie River, where the children are kept through the entire winter.

On Christmas Day, these children are not able to join their families because of heavy snows, but they are made quite at home during the Yuletide holiday with a party and plenty of presents.

Constant contact with white men means that the Eskimo is rapidly absorbing the white man's religion, customs and speech. But they are still proud of their ways and language, and on Christmas Day rather than say "Merry Christmas," many still prefer to say

ᑭᓄᑦ ᐅᑦᑭᑦ

Not all white men's ways are easy for the Eskimo to follow. Caroling, for example, presents something of a hazard in the Arctic.

THIRTY BELOW

"Last year about 25 of our Eskimo teen-agers gathered to go carol singing," said Mrs. Gardener. "We sang the carols in the traditional way, going from house to house and singing from outside—even though the temperature was 30 degrees below!"

It's only recently that the Eskimos at Cape Dorset have accepted the custom of giving gifts at Christmas.

"When an Eskimo wants to give a present to another Eskimo, he knows the Eskimo would prefer a gift bought from a white man's store," Mrs. Gardener declared, "but when he wants to give something to a white person, he knows his gift will be more appreciated if he makes it himself."

Although Canada's Eskimos live on St. Nick's doorstep, they have been slow in accepting the old white-whiskered patron of Christmas.

When RCAF personnel at Resolute Bay air base, for instance, once dressed up a man as Santa Claus and brought him before the children at a party, the sight of the laughing, red-robed Santa sent the Eskimo tots flying away in horror.

Wearing the white middies and navy skirts of their uniforms, the Canadian Girls in Training of the Haliburton Group joined with members of their organization across Canada in an impressive candlelight service, which has become a symbol of the national strength and unity of the C.G.I.T. movement.

The Service, prepared by the National C.G.I.T. Committee gives thousands of girls the opportunity to worship together during the Christmas season.

Christine Neville and Pearl Bailey conducted the service, while Dawn Stewart, the President, was the Candlelighter. Faye McCracken and Marlene Wilson were the ushers.

The Church Choir assisted with the music throughout the service.

vice, with Mrs. M. McKnight at the organ. Mrs. T. Hicks, representing the local Explorers, who were also present, sang the little known carol "All my Heart this night rejoices". On The Day Of The Christian

MESSAGE FROM CANADA'S CHURCH LEADERS

A quick glance at any history text makes it clear that Christians all too often have proven themselves capable of acting most un-Christian toward each other.

On Christmas Day, however, the bond manifests itself. Members of all Christian churches bow to pray for peace for all mankind—and they become at last conscious that regardless of which church they are praying in, they are praying to the same God, to the Christ who was born for the salvation of all men.

And so Christmas becomes truly the Day of the Christian, and perhaps one day Christians will extend this spirit of understanding and common good will into every day of the year.

In the following paragraphs, spiritual leaders of some of Canada's churches extend a Christmas message to not only members of their own denomination, but to Christians of every church.

BAPTIST

The Rev. R. F. Bullen, General Secretary-Treasurer of the Baptist Federation of Canada:

Of Christmas, someone wrote, "The whole world turned selfless for a day..." What a pleasing revolution this would be! And yet, this is the power of Christmas—the power of change.

I have recently returned from visiting behind the Iron Curtain, where I discovered the religious festivals—such as Christmas—are not recognized.

But I was reminded that many westerners celebrate the day but have not permitted its message to change their lives.

Canadian Baptists, part of a world-wide fellowship, share this divine concern for the necessity and possibility of the change of human nature through the Christmas message.

Our Christmas wish is that all Canadians will permit the changes about which we sing in the familiar carols.

ROMAN CATHOLIC

His Eminence, James C. Cardinal McGuigan, Roman Catholic Church of Canada:

My Christmas wish, in this year of grace, 1962, is one of love and fellowship for all men and especially those of good will.

There is no extravagance or commercialism in the "better gifts" which the Infant in the crib brought to the world of Bethlehem.

We sing, "Silent Night, Holy Night." Let there be holiness. We sing "Come, Let Us Adore Him." Let there be adoration.

We sing of a "White Christmas." May the roofs of all the homes in Canada sparkle white in the moonlight over the good family life that they shelter.

All of this I mean when I wish to each and all a Merry Christmas.

PRESBYTERIAN

Rev. Ross K. Cameron, Moderator of the 88th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada:

The Advent Season reminds Christian people of the fact that God broke into human history, that the supernatural came into the natural in the person of Jesus Christ.

This is a truth filled with hope in a world of turmoil. We believe that God has given us light in darkness, that His purposes will be accomplished and that the troubled individual person may find peace and calm.

Words convey the thrill of Advent poorly. We need music such as Bach's mighty strains and the lovely carols we all enjoy.

In every way by symbol, word and song let us express to one another the deep joy and comfort in the coming of our Saviour.

ANGLICAN

The Most Rev. Howard H. Clark, Primate of the Anglican Church of Canada:

A familiar sign at this season reads, "Do your Christmas shopping early."

The Church has similar advice for her members: "Do your Christmas shopping early."

And to help us she gives us the season of Advent, as a time when we prepare for the Coming (Advent) of our Saviour.

Christmas was the beginning of His sacrifice. He humbled Himself. He, the living God, became Man.

Here is a spirit hard for us to imitate, for we remain full of pride and hate. Yet how desperately we need to humble ourselves before the terrifying greatness of God. It is when we learn to be obedient to the Truth that speaks to our souls that quietly, silently, Christmas comes into our hearts.

May His peace find you this Christmas, and may His peace descend upon the nations and make them United Nations in fact.

UNITED CHURCH

The Right Rev. J. R. Mutchmor, Moderator of the United Church of Canada:

Three groups welcomed Jesus—wise men, shepherds and righteous folk. The last group was called "the people of the earth."

Today Jesus, "the divine intrusion," is being best understood by the counter-parts of these groups: in short, by scientists, musicians and the little people.

The wise men of old sought meaning in the stars. The shepherds of old heard angels sing about "peace on earth." Many musicians and poets today have similar experiences.

There were also humble folks in Jesus' day. We have the quiet people of the land today. Christmas means most to people in little places: in prairie villages; in the countryside; by the sea; in mountain valleys. The quiet of the land know Jesus Christ, the Saviour, is born.

GREEK ORTHODOX
His Eminence Athenagoras, Greek Orthodox Metropolitan of Canada:

Twenty centuries ago, on the first Christmas, the Angels of God proclaimed peace on earth and good will among men. Today, as never before, this message of hope and courage is difficult even to be heard by a sickening humanity from the terrors of a total war and distraction, prepared by the enemies of God and man.

Men of good will are deceived and mocked by the prophets of nihilism and international treaties and agreements, are ignominiously violated.

Men of guile, who speak of freedom and democracy and mean slavery and tyranny, dare to present themselves as preachers of peace and protectors of the weak. And they seem to succeed to entangle in their schemes of deception many people, some of whom afterwards are enforced to play with their conscience and betray their faith and their country.

If we want to protect the freedom we now enjoy, we must prove ourselves lovers of God, brothers of men, haters of vice and deception and fighters against tyranny. Let us repulse the danger, befalling upon all mankind, with Christian conviction. Let us proceed with determination to protect the world from the approaching threat.

Let us pray that the free nations honor their Christian inheritance and be sincere and remain stable in the camp of Christ, working sacrificially for peace and justice with honor, good will and determination.

May the mystery of Christmas enrich our hearts and minds with unshakable courage and stability of decision to live as Christians, to protect with conviction the values of our Christian faith, to pray as brothers and children of the same Divine Father, the ruler of the Universe and all men.

CARNARVON

Mrs. Alex Hewitt is visiting with her daughter in Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Rogers and family.

Mr. Gordon Allcorn had the misfortune to fall last week, dislocating his arm. We hope it is less painful in the very near future. Mrs. Bob Gorrie is hobbling around on a foot cast these days due to some bone ailment. Speedy recovery Ruth.

The sympathy of the community is extended to the family of the late Andrew Shuyler of Toronto and Horseshoe Lake. Mr. Shuyler was well known to many people in this area. Interment was at Minden on Saturday.

(Intended for Last Week)

Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Skelding and family visited with Mrs. Charles Skelding Sr. in Trout Creek last Sunday.

The ladies of the community met at the home of Mrs. Syd Barnes on Wednesday night for their annual Sunshine Sister Christmas Party. The evening was spent in contests, games and court whist amid much hilarity. The highlight of the evening being finding out who the Sunshine Sister was who had been so kind to one since drawing her name last year. New names were drawn for the coming year.

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL

IN AN OLD BARN

A Christmas Miracle

By JOHN BENNETT

The doe stood hesitantly at the doorway to the broken-down barn, the scent of man strong in her flared nostrils.

Then, her fears overcome by an urgent need for shelter, she stepped daintily inside, gaining confidence with each step.

It was warm in the old barn, out of the biting air of Canada's winter and when she sank exhausted to her knees, she felt a thick bed of musty straw beneath her panting chest and soft along her swollen flanks.

With a shudder she lay her head down, closed her eyes, and felt her baby move within her.

Outside, the relic of a bitter day was passing and grey veils stole across the deep snow-covered fields. The forest close by gathered darkness into the secret places.

Hidden from the old barn behind a clump of trees, lights winked in the windows of the big Currell Farmhouse as Jean Currell called her husband Joe and their small son Little Joe to supper.

"Come on you two," she said, "you're both on short rations tonight. We have to leave plenty of room for that big turkey tomorrow."

HOWLING WOLVES

There was laughter. A little later Joe Currell refused a third slice of apple pie and another cup of coffee.

"I'd better go and see the stock's OK," he said. "They've been uneasy ever since we heard those wolves last night."

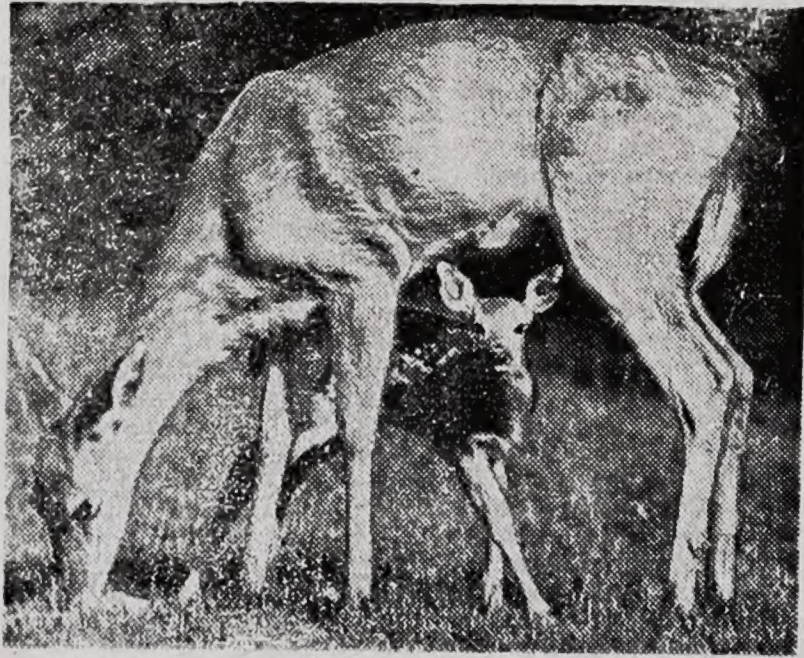

A frown crossed Jean's pretty face. "I don't like it," she said. "We've never had them so far south before; it worries me."

"Nothing to worry about," laughed her husband, "they won't come in here after you or Little Joe, nor after the cattle. They're too smart for that. By the sounds, they were after the deer in that harbor place they use over by the swamp."

He headed for the door buttoning his heavy winter coat and reaching for an old woollen cap.

"Come on Shep," he joked, "come and keep me safe from the wolves." But the collie had beaten him to it and stood there waiting with wagging tail.

Outside, the cold bit Joe's nose and he shrugged deep into his old warm coat. Shep danced around then headed out in a run, plowing up snow and plunging over drifts like a seal through waves of water.

TRAPPED!

Shep stopped as a strange wild scent wafted to his keen nose down the falling wind, and, sniffing, he headed to the old barn just in time to block the frightened deer which was headed for safety. As Shep snarled, the deer shrank back against the far wall, heavy flanks heaving, watching the dog through great frightened eyes.

"What have you got in here?" asked Joe appearing at the entrance, playing his flashlight around the barn. "My gosh," he said softly, "if it isn't a young doe. Come on, Shep, leave her alone."

And after he pulled the excited collie outside, he wedged the broken door back into place and headed for the cowshed.

"What was Shep barking at?" asked his wife, when he was back at the house.

"Not a wolf, I hope."

"Far nicer than that," said her husband mysteriously. "Come on, get your coats on. I've got something to show you in the old barn. Pick up some feed on the way. We have a guest for Christmas and the least we can do is to be a bit hospitable."

A minute or so later Joe pulled back the broken door and held his big gasoline lantern high. It showed the doe huddled in the dirty straw and beside her, still damp from birth, a fawn.

"Well, look at that," Joe whispered in awe. "A winter fawn! No wonder she came down into the barn. Her fear of us was less than her fear of the wolves. She wouldn't have stood a chance if they had found her."

"Isn't it months premature?" asked Jean, "I thought they came about March, not Christmas time."

"You're right, Honey, they do generally come later," said Joe, "but I heard of them being born at this time."

SHINING EYES

Little Joe's eyes were shining bright.

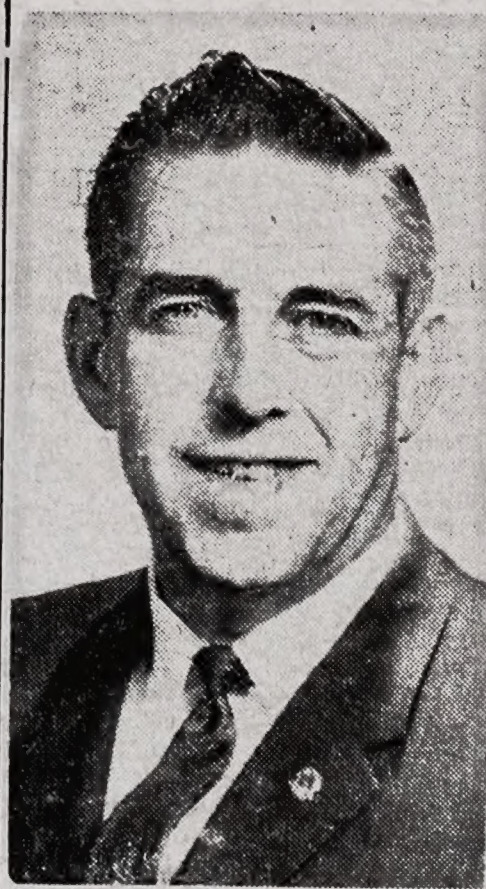

"Daddy," he said, "it's just like the real Christmas with a little baby being born right here, in our barn on Christmas Eve."

Joe laughed. "And I suppose we are the three Kings bearing gifts. Come on drop the feed. We'll keep them around until they stand a good chance to survive. After all, what's another mouth or two?"

He wedged the door again and the three walked back to the warm comfort of the big farmhouse.

Down across the valley the power was turned on to light up the big tree in the centre of the village. The doe settled down to lick her firstborn close by her side.

A faint cheer carried across the snow laden fields as the big lamp on top of the tree flashed. From the old barn it looked as if a bright new star had arisen in the east.

Everyone Rolls Up Their Sleeves . . .

CHRISTMAS MEANS WORK

By WALT MAKDATOR

Christmas comes to Canadian homes each year bringing more than just gifts and good cheer. It has a habit of bringing along a lot of hard work as well.

For although Christmas is undoubtedly Canada's happiest holiday, it can also be the most fatiguing.

During the Yuletide season, everyone from the postman to the department store salesman has to add some extra hustle to meet the Christmas rush.

Even the housewife has to quicken her pace. She has to stir up the Christmas pudding, mix up the mincemeat, clean out the house in readiness for the family get-together, and perform a thousand other household chores in preparation for the festive day.

CHRISTMAS CROWDS

Then there's the Christmas shopping, shuffling with the crowds from store to store looking for the perfect present for husband Harry, sister Sue, or brother Bob.

Of course, once the presents are bought, there's still the wrapping to do. And inevitably the rest of the family feels mother is such an artistic wrapper that they would like her to fancy up their pile of presents too.

After that, there's the Christmas cards to do. There's a hundred addresses to look up, a hundred cards to sign, and a hundred stamps to lick.

But the husband doesn't escape his share of Christmas time chores.

For example, it's his duty to go out and choose the Christmas tree. And to please the family, he naturally feels obligated to pick out the biggest one he can find—even though he knows he's the one who'll have to lug it home.

After that, there's the lights for him to string up around the house. Then there's the lawn Santa and the rooftop reindeer to put together. And perhaps the hardest job of all, he has to find some remote corner in which to hide the children's presents so they won't be able to find them.

The children, too, seem to work a little harder at their errands and schoolwork just before Christmas. After all, it's their last chance to impress old Saint Nick.

GRANDMOTHER'S GIFTS

And if it turns out to be a white Christmas, you may learn your youngster is more than willing to go out and shovel the front. Don't be surprised by this. It's just that he wouldn't want to see his grandmother slip on the walk when she comes to the house . . . carrying all those heavy presents.

Increased work at Christmas extends beyond the family circle. It reaches every part of our society and economy.

Store sales boom, post offices are swamped with greeting cards, telephone companies have to hire extra help to handle the thousands of holiday season calls, unemployed men find temporary jobs cutting or selling Christmas trees, turkey farmers sell off their stock of temperamental birds, and trains, buses and airplanes become filled with Canadians who are "going home" for Christmas.

Even charitable organizations seem to get a shot of adrenalin this time of year. Social workers and welfare agents make an all out effort on Christmas to bring extra treats to less fortunate families.

And believe it or not, there are hundreds of Canadians who have already started working hard for Christmas, 1963.

CHRISTMAS ALL YEAR

They are the designers and manufacturers of toys, Christmas decorations and greeting cards, who have to work at least a year ahead, preparing for the next Christmas.

"Christmas is a 365-day season," reports J. C. Galbraith, president of Tinsel Manufacturing Ltd., who supply Canadians with much of the stringing foil and tinsel they use to decorate their Christmas trees.

But when you see the work piling up around your home, aren't YOU glad Christmas isn't a "365-day season"?

St. Nick's not the only person who has to work hard before Christmas.

Christmas is a tranquil snowy scene and brightly-wrapped gifts . . . it is a time of hope and rejoicing for the many things it is our privilege to possess. We wish you an "old-fashioned" Christmas, filled with love and good cheer, and the deep satisfaction of friendships renewed. Happy Holidays!

Mrs. McArthur, the President, welcomed all the guests and hoped they would have a good time.

The usual business was conducted and Christmas treats and cards planned to send to sick or shut-ins.

Birthday wishes were sung to Mrs. B. J. Walker on her 80th birthday and to Mrs. Arnold Coulter as well. After this we all joined in Christmas songs, accompanied by Mrs. Clarke. Then Mrs. Locke, in her own fine way, gave several readings for our entertainment. After this we all certainly enjoyed the songs "O Little Town of Bethlehem" and "Silent Night" sung by Miss Janice Robinson.

Mrs. O'Neill was Santa for the Secret Pal gifts and Mrs. Arnold Coulter and Mrs. Moore did the exchange of gifts.

The meeting adjourned and all enjoyed the buffet lunch set out on the tastefully decorated table.

Huskies Tie League Leaders 4 - 4

The Haliburton Arena was the scene of a well played and exciting game on Saturday past. The highly rated Aurora Tigers were held to a 4-all tie by the bustling Huskies. With an excellent display of team work and fore-checking our boys could have easily come out on top but the goals wouldn't come in he dying minutes.

The 350 fans on hand were pleased with the work of the locals and although the Huskies record on the road is far from perfect, they certainly play hockey in front of their own spectators.

Chris Carroll who has completely recovered from a bad shoulder injury sparked the Huskies with two goals. Mike Jackson who played his first game in a Huskie uniform was also outstanding.

Aurora opened the scoring early in the first period by Holancin from Alcorn. A few minutes later Chris Carroll tied up the game on a pass from Lyle Sawyer. The rest of the period was Haliburton all the way, but the Huskies couldn't find the mark. Only two penalties were handed out in the first stanza, both to Haliburton, Carroll for charging and Roberts for trip-ping.

The play opened up in the second period, in which six goals were scored, three for Haliburton and three for Aurora. Carleton from Alcorn scored at 2:15, but once again the diligent checking of Chris Carroll paid off with the second goal at 3:00 minutes to tie it up again. Ron Stackhouse scored on a screen shot to put the Huskies out in front, but four minutes later it was even again. Ron Cummings scored at the 13:36 mark which could have been the winner but Aurora came back to keep everything even with a goal from Jack Foran. The second period ended tied and saw Aurora receive three of the four penalties.

Dave Austen played a steady game in goal for the Huskies, but in the third period he closed the door completely. There was no scoring in the third frame.

Fred Hewitt missed an open net and several other Huskies came close but couldn't notch the winner. They swarmed over the Aurora net but to no avail. The dying seconds brought the crowd to their feet but the buzzer sounded giving the Huskies the single point.

The three stars picked by Jim Scheffee were Chris Carroll, John Gould of Aurora and Ron Stackhouse. The attendance was down due to the Christmas season (350). Fred Hewitt is still close to the top of the league in scoring. Mike Jackson will help the Huskies on their way to the top. Don't forget the home game against Little Britain is on Thursday evening, December 23 at 7:30 p.m.

Westminster United Church Scene Of Tebble - Sedgwick Wedding

Westminster United Church was the setting for the marriage of Viola Minnie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Sedgwick of Gelert, to Donald Ross Tebble, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Tebble of Hamilton.

The church was tastefully decorated with yellow and bronze chrysanthemums. Reverend John Porter officiated at the double ring ceremony, assisted by Mr. Tom York. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Barison.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked lovely in a floor length gown of white bridal satin, fashioned with a scoop neckline, lily point sleeves and a bustle bow with long streamers. Her cabbage rose headdress held her elbow length veil and she carried a bouquet of red roses.

The maid of honour, Miss Catharine Wilkinson, friend of the bride, and the Junior bridesmaid, Miss Norma Sedgwick, sister of the bride, wore identical street length dresses of green peau de soie. Their headdresses were short veils caught by a cabbage rose of peau de soie to match their dresses. They carried nosegays of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums.

Mr. Joseph Malinowski of Scarborough, friend of the groom, was the best man. The ushers were Mr. James Tebble of Hamilton and Mr. Ray Sedgwick of Gelert.

The reception was held at Bowmanville, Ontario. The bride's mother looked attractive in a silver blue dress with black accessories and a corsage of pink chrysanthemums. The groom's mother looked charming in a pale blue three piece suit with black accessories and a yellow corsage of chrysanthemums.

A toast to the bride was proposed by Reverend Wendell Sedgwick, cousin of the bride, and Douglas Smith, friend of the bride and groom, acted as Master of Ceremonies.

The happy couple left for a honeymoon to Quebec City and the Northern States. The bride wore a ruby red two piece suit with black accessories and a corsage of white roses, centred with one red rose. They will reside in Whitby, Ontario.

Prior to her marriage the bride was feted with four showers at which she received many useful and practical gifts.
